- Steve J. Barry, Jr., TWI. Steve has been an active member of the tradeshow industry since 1972. He started as a labor provider for the one and only air show held in the U.S. at Dulles Air Port in 1972. From there he formed TWI to provide logistical services for U.S. exhibitors participating in international exhibitions and tradeshow. Under Steve's leadership, TWI has become one of the leading providers of customs brokerage, return transportation, and related services for exhibitors participating in U.S. tradeshow.

- Tom Moble, Global Spectrum Tom is the first building manager that opened his door to EACs and the EACA 8 years ago. He is the innovator of the TEAM – WE approach to resolving issues that come up on the showfloor, and has been successful in getting all parties involved in trade shows in Chicago to work together. And, the Chicago TEAM model is the template by which all other EACA Chapters guide their actions.

- Dick Gorbett, Global & Atlas Van Lines. Dick put his stamp on this industry when he was the Director of Show Operations for Global Van Lines, Anaheim, CA. He was a strong supporter (both financial & fraternal) of the industry with his dedication to industry associations like EDPA & TSEA. Dick left Global in the mid 80's to accept a Vice President's position at Atlas in Evansville, IN, before retiring in the late 90's.

- Art Ursin, Poirot /Exhibitors Service of America, Inc/ Metro Exhibitors Service. Art started in the tradeshow industry in the late 1960's and became President of Poirot, a general service contractor in Chicago. In 1982 he created Exhibitors Service of America and then Metro Exhibitors Service, two of the first EAC's that serviced the Chicagoland area. Art's philosophy about trade show labor was summed up best when he said, "if they say put it on the roof, start building a scaffold".
